PRESS CLIPS:

"In this playful critique of the machinations of the global economy, armies of doll-size mechanical businessmen are let loose to crawl around a vast miniature landscape populated with the occasional electrical tower, tree, or hill and surrounded by a placid blue sky, recalling the pseudo-realism of a model train set circling a pastoral scene marked by signs of industry...The genius of this piece is how the machismo of the GI Joe doll readymade is détourned by the artist. The once-heroic stealthiness of the soldier during military combat becomes lowly mindless crawling." - Rachel Stevens, Flash Art, March-April 2004
