

1. The Castle in the Air. Film with audio. 15 minutes.

A story about how the artist bought a hotel room in Copenhagen and later an airport in the Westfjords of Iceland—neither of which officially exists.

You can watch it on your phone by scanning this code:

2. From the series Air Memoirs. Hibiscus tea on paper. 2025

"It is summer, and the airport office is surrounded by lupins."

3. From the series Air Memoirs. Hibiscus tea on paper. 2025

"Twice a day, I walk to the end of the runway. On the way back, I pull the stroller behind me to keep the wind from waking the baby."

4. From the series Air Memoirs. Hibiscus tea on paper. 2026

"When we replace the windowpanes, we discover rot in the timber on the western side of the house. We remove the wall panels, and for a couple of days the interior is open to the outside. How beautiful the light is when there are no walls, we think. Then we realize where that thought leads.

We can't tear the whole house down!"

5. From the series Air Memoirs. Hibiscus tea on paper. 2025

"In my imagination I place different objects on the runway. It is a play with scale.

An oversized espresso maker becomes a strange kind of aircraft

—a spaceship, or an airplane from another era.."

6. Ambitions. Textile color on silk. 2015

"This painting was made during a crisis in my studies, when my calling as a storyteller was overshadowed by the pursuit of success. The only image in my mind was that of an artist with an expensive aluminum suitcase, always catching a flight to the next exhibition.

With my newly acquired airport, I somehow finally became part of the jet set."

7. From the series Air Memoirs. Hibiscus tea on paper. 2026

"I also think of the runway as a potential site for exhibiting sculptures.

A detached boarding staircase, for instance, leading up to the clouds drifting by."

8. From the series Air Memoirs. Hibiscus tea on paper. 2026

"A pile of black sand suddenly appears in our view. It looks like land art. But it probably isn't."

9. From the series Air Memoirs. Hibiscus tea on paper. 2026

"The runway ends at a cliff wall, where a woman troll has been turned to stone.

She didn't reach shelter before the sun rose. I see myself in her. I can't leave this place now.

A cliffhanger."

EXHIBITION OVERVIEW

