

Ara Dymond

January 14th - February 19th, 2011

What once were objects become closer to life/thought. Thought is life is object is thought is life is object is thought is object is life. Object is an arcane term the moment it is invoked/summoned/said. It is absolute divinity, the precise wheel/engine of immanence and transcendence." –Michel Olivier

"That sense and presence are inextricable—that is what I hold dearest to me." –Michael Oliver

"About town, locomoting—somehow deciding. Coming to place and term, and alternately a term in space. I used to wonder when it would all end, but I found a way to come about it all over again. At first I was consternated, pitied myself lost. Now I'm in rotation, I'm causing things and myself. I don't know how this will end. I can't stop." –Office Michaels

"They won. We won." –Michael Chance

"Nobody can say what it denotes. It comes about. Who harvests it harvests it." –Chames Choice

"Form is never erroneous as long as it doesn't chase itself." –Chase Crawford

"Form is never erroneous as long as it doesn't covet itself." –Crawford Crawford

~~"I've come to hate my body and all that it requires in this world"~~ –Candy Says

"In between all categories of inert/innate life are the pockets we call life" –Candy W. Said

"I love an ancient work for its novelty" –Tristan Tzara

"I like what I like" –Tristan Tzara "I like Tristan Tzara" –Tsara Christensen

"I used to dream about superheroes. And then I found art." –The Pied Piper

"Intimate discrepancies" –Close Call

"We ride big ships and small boats. We come and went; we are and go. We go and are to see. We see for as long as we can. (And we feel the same way.) A space/place is a place/space and we want to be it itself: that's how we can be." –The Sun Also Rises

"There is no horizon of becoming. A process abates itself and vanishes through its very actuality. We have been given infinite opportunity. We become nothing, we can only be who we are." –For Whom the Bell Tolls

"After all, the moment is elastic" –The Jean Genie