ABOUT
CHANNEL 3...

Inspired by the television channel that's set for videotape viewing, Channel 3 features a spectrum of alternative programming of works by artists who are recognized outside of New York and/or outside the art gallery arena itself.

Erik Brunetti, known for his subversive Fuct t-shirt designs, has exhibited his paintings, drawings, prints, and artist's books in Los Angeles, Melbourne, and New York.

Tracey Emin will inaugurate the first in a series of A4 photocopy prints in Channel 3. Her exhibitions and performances in Cologne, Istanbul, London, Minneapolis, New York, and Stockholm are already legendary. This is only her second appearance in a New York gallery.

Grand Central Station (i.e., Matt Carroll, Pat Carroll, and Karen Jackson), having created the graphics for the British pop groups, Black Grape and Happy Mondays, has exhibited its Hello, Playmates series in London. Their work is in the collection of the Victoria and Albert Museum.

Jaime Levy, a "superstar of cyberspace," is known for her innovative interactive online multimedia work. An on-site and online survey exhibition of her work took place in Brisbane in 1996. Ms. Levy will exhibit "hard copy" works for the first time in Channel 3.

Pedro Ortuno, whose photomural had been on view at the St. George Terminal in Staten Island in 1993-94, produces three-dimensional photo-based works concerning the cinema, public transportation, and realism.

Jessica Voorsanger, a native New Yorker, devotes herself to paying extravagant homage to her pop culture heroes. Her works have been exhibited in Australia, Germany, Great Britain, Italy, and the USA. Her Star Stories project has been published in Dazed & Confused Magazine and on the World Wide Web.

Lyndal Walker takes street culture, particularly as it relates to youth fashion, and "fast forwards" it into the culture-at-large. A founding member of the artist-run 1st Floor Gallery in Melbourne, she is exhibiting in the USA for the first time.

Gallery hours for this exhibition are Tuesday through Friday, 12 Noon to 6pm. For further information and/or photographs please call 212 279 9219.
