Drew Dominick & Ross Knight
04 January through 01 February 2001

Team Gallery will present a two-person exhibition of new work by Drew Dominick and Ross Knight from 04 January through 01 February 2001. The gallery is located at 527 West 26th Street, between Tenth and Eleventh Avenues, on the ground floor.

This exhibition is made up of the kinds of preparatory materials often relegated to a secondary status in the work of young sculptors: drawings and maquettes. There is a slight twist here, however, as Dominick's maquettes prepare for shows that could never happen, while Knight's drawings are based on sculptures he's already completed.

Dominick will be represented by two maquettes. Intricate yet roughly hewn, they envision impossible exhibitions in possible spaces: art galleries in which a growing, thriving forestry engulfs the traditional white cube. Both pieces — one a dream show at Team, the other at Kasmin Gallery — are made from the kinds of materials that speak of reuse and of survival. Repurposed foamcore, VHS-players, used monitors, cheap speakers, and sheetrock, all find their way into Dominick's proposals for solo shows that incorporate chunks of wildwood, alongside video.

Knight's poster-sized drawings are made after the sculptures they mimic, and function as explorations that play with layering and translucence. These large-scale works are constructed from cut components of decorative cellophane and vinyl that are then super-imposed using spray adhesive onto sheets of transparent acetate. Unframed, they are mounted to the gallery's walls, which complete the drawings by receiving the small slivers of shadows cast by the collaged elements.

Dominick's work has been reviewed in Art in America, The New York Times, The New Art Examiner, and Art Issues. Knight's work has been reviewed in Artforum, The Village Voice, The New Yorker, and Sculpture Magazine. His work has also been shown at American Fine Arts Co., P.S.1, and The Sculpture Center.

Dominick and Knight have each had two solos at Team.

Gallery hours are Tuesday through Saturday, 10am to 6pm. For further information and/or photographs please call 212 279 9219.
