

Are you familiar with BLESS?

BLESS is a visionary substitute to make the near future worth living for. She has no nationality and thinks that sport is quite nice. She's always attracted by temptations and loves change. She lives right now and her surroundings are charged by her presence. She tends to be future orientated.

The Paris and Berlin based duo BLESS (Désirée Heiss and Ines Kaag) refuse to capitalize on any one milieu, and instead explore the differences between, and the mixing of, the systems of art, fashion, and design. They glide over the conventions of production, distribution and display to create things (to wear, to use, to look at, to smile at) for now and forever. Their collections are titled to reflect a current mood that may ostensibly last for many seasons to come, questioning consumerist behavioral patterns and proposing instead a 'Present Perfect Continuous'.

They come to Athens to inhabit the Radio Athènes headquarters at 15 Petraki Street and a private apartment on the first floor of the same building. They transform these interior spaces into a BLESSHome to present their ideal and artistic values to the greek public for the first time.
