

It may be hot and you might have only just arrived that afternoon and I would be on my way to the airport in a hire car whilst leaving friends who had seen it before cooking supper we might have stopped off there on our way back to look at it before reaching the house and taking off your many clothes you might have been wearing because the summer of your country had been much cooler than here this year we may swim before drinking a Campari and soda it might be a little awkward between us for the last time we saw each other may have been a while ago but at least there would be the dogs around we may have looked at each other in the car on the way back and we may even be able to see it from the window of our room and hopefully the oak trees that grow on the top.
