

We might wake it may have rained in the night and we wouldn't yet have curtains on our windows as we might not have been living there long out the window we would be able to see on to the roof where there may be a puddle of rainwater where the roof sinks but not enough to worry about if it had rained that is and two dying plants sitting next to each other in wooden boxes that have been weathered over the years and then another plant and box slightly smaller also weathered also dying behind the plants there may be railings and next door'S apartment we might see them occasionally but for the most of the time it would just be the view of their window and their door out on to the roof then all we would be able to see would be the shelf through the bathroom window which has nothing on it and the white blinds that hang on the window to the door and remain closed throughout the year.
