

*Soon it will be EVENING. And the shadows grow. I may call them my friends. They say, come my boy, off, we must travel on. But the stone at my feet demands I stay. All that is long gone, very long gone. If I remember right, I picked up the stone, stuck it in the pocket of my jeans, and followed my friends into the night. **