INTERIORS

Juliette Blightman, Ann Cathrin November Høibo, Scott Olson, Willem de Rooij

Interiors is a group exhibition that will happen in three successive parts. Playing on the fact that Lulu is located in a former living room, this exhibition intends to create a series of contemplative moods, ranging from a cinematic quietude, to a calm and uncanny domesticity, to an absurd sense of incongruity with the repurposed and ultimately indeterminate nature of the space itself.

Juliette Blightman's classic 16mm film As a Period in Which Nothing Happens (2007), which depicts an English living room, will inaugurate the first part of the exhibition with a highly improbable mise-en-abyme. Part two will feature Scott Olson's richly involute and intimate abstractions, a loom-woven textile by Ann Cathrin November Høibo, and a sculpture by Juliette Blightman. The overall impression aims toward an elegant parody of quasi-sacral interior decoration. Finally, the third and final part will be exclusively composed of Willem de Rooij's Bouquet IX (2012). At once deeply elegiac and baroque, the large, ivory-colored bouquet, which comprises ten different kinds of white flower, will conclude the exhibition with a mood that is as funereal as it is over-the-top.
