

Joanne Greenbaum

Index of First Lines

June 13 - July 11, 2021

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

KDR305 presents, "Index of First Lines," An exhibition featuring new paintings by Joanne Greenbaum.

These small abstract works on canvas are a new series of paintings created alongside Joanne's larger-scaled works. Acting as repositories of extra energy and paint accumulation, these paintings function as complete works and as a record of her studio life.

Similar to annotations in notebooks and handmade books the artist makes, the works become a joyful collection of mark-making. Over time they become more than a collection of moves and a structure eventually emerges. The paintings refuse to adhere to the "golden rules" and are unguided by preexisting ideas, either of the artist's own making or that of painting culture itself. The results become combinations of these elements in their random unconscious way.

Joanne Greenbaum (b. 1953, New York, NY)

Joanne received her BA from Bard College, Annandale-on-Hudson, NY. Recent exhibitions include Reyes Finn Gallery, Detroit, MI, Rachel Uffner Gallery, New York; Texas Gallery, Houston, TX; and 56 Henry, New York, NY. Joanne's work has been exhibited in institutions such as The Nerman Museum of Contemporary Art, Overland Park, KS; Kunsthalle Düsseldorf, Dusseldorf, Germany; and MoMA PS1, New York, NY; among many others. In 2008, a career-spanning survey of her work, with a corresponding catalog, was mounted by Haus Konstruktiv in Zurich, Switzerland, and traveled to the Museum Abteiberg in Monchengladbach, Germany. In 2018, The Tufts University Art Galleries at the School of the Museum of Fine Arts in Boston, MA, mounted Joanne Greenbaum: Things We Said Today, a comprehensive solo exhibition that traveled to the Otis College of Art and Design in Los Angeles, CA. Joanne lives and works in Long Island, NY.

KDR305 is a contemporary exhibition space housed in a 101 yr old cottage in the heart of Little Havana in Miami, FL. The exhibition opens Sunday, June 13th, from 4 pm onwards. For images and information please contact katia@kdr305.com
