SINOPSIS

This video projected on the paper surface emerges from editing various attempts of a fluorescent lamp at turning on. The elements within this abstract composition appear, disappear and eventually explode into bursts of energy.

Through several attempts to stabilise the image, light and shadow reflect at different speeds.

In 1975 Robert Fripp & Brian Eno recorded the album "Evening Star."

One of the tracks, called An Index of Metal, was made with samples of metallic machinery. Magnified images of this song's record grooves were taken by means of an electron microscope that electrified the particles in the phonographic plate. The resulting images flicker in unison with the sounds from the same track.
