

Farnham to Floresville, and elsewhere which invalidates here

Saturday 30th October 2021
Floresville

It is 5:59 pm in Floresville, Texas, on the 30th of October. Rob hits record and films the view out of the window for 4 minutes. There is a tree, it moves in the wind, and what sounds like a plane going over and a bird song. The noise could also be cars in the distance, this noise continues throughout the film, along with what also sounds like crickets. On the patio just outside the window, is two cacti in separate pots, they don't move, the film ends at 6:03 pm.

Sunday 31st October 2021
Farnham

At the same time, as Rob hits record at 5:59 pm, it is 1:59 am on Halloween in Farnham. I am awake and record a film of the view out of my window for 4 minutes. There is a tree in one of the windowpanes, it moves very slightly, there isn't much noise, it is almost silent. It is black outside, except for the moonlight that reflects in the window and a greenish light to the side of the tree. At 2:03 am I stop recording and go back to bed, but it is 1:03 am Greenwich Mean Time.

Sunday 7th November 2021
Farnham

It is the 7th of November and 7:59 am in Farnham. I film the view out of my window, which is slightly open, the edge of my bed and a potted palm. There is a trailer parked in the courtyard, and it is possible to make out the window the moonlight was reflected in from the previous film, and two parked cars. The branches move occasionally when the wind blows and a man in a high vis vest walks out of one door and in another behind the trailer. It is possible to sometimes hear me, but I am out of shot, the film ends at 8:03 am.

Saturday 7th November 2021
Floresville

At the same time as I am filming, at 7:59 am in Farnham, Rob hits record, it is 1:59 am in Floresville. He films out the same window as before, it is black, and hard to see anything, there is movement in the nothingness though. There is a high pitch noise, at first it sounds like children screaming but it isn't, it is coyotes, yowling. There is also the sound of the road. The film finishes at 2:03 am, but it is 1:03 am US standard time.
