Galerie Gregor Staiger is pleased to begin the year with a two-part group exhibition spanning across the gallery's main space at Limmatstrasse and inaugurating our new, temporary location in a former office building at Zollikerstrasse 251. The expanded space deviates from conventional exhibition architecture, providing a contrast to the main gallery and its more traditional white-cube form. For this show, it also serves to expand the format of an exhibition with gallery artists Rachal Bradley, Vittorio Brodmann, Monster Chetwynd, Florian Germann, Lucy Stein, and Nora Turato by including LED wall sculptures by Mathis Altmann and anodised aluminium plates by Raphael Hefti, works which resonate within the frame of reference of this exhibition and the art community in Zurich at large. The latter is particularly relevant here, as the temporary space neighbours the galleries and exhibitions spaces of Lorenzo Bernet, Priya Shetty, and Markus Rischgasser, which opened projects on the same day.
