Amanda, Klea, Kevin, Alissa, Jeremy, Annie, and Michael are all white, working class, and addicted to drugs or alcohol. Their attempts to get clean feature in Addicted, a 2010 Reality TV series produced by Asylum Entertainment. Addiction rates for men are nearly twice as high as for women in all categories except downers. Research reveals that American doctors and lawyers have higher rates of addiction than the general population. Among doctors, anesthesiologists report the highest rates, followed by psychiatrists. Easy access to drugs in a high-stress work environment is intuitively cited by most people as the cause and indeed anesthesiologists were the first group in the US to begin seriously abusing the opioid fentanyl, back in the 1990s. But that doesn't account for the fact that within the medical profession, American doctors have the highest rates of addiction, suicide, and depression in the world. American doctors often first get hooked in medical school with the majority of residency programs reporting at least one death per semester from opioid overdose. Medical school doesn't just direct debt-ridden students towards lucrative specialized care rather than primary care, it also imposes an unusually grueling training regime when compared with other countries, a regime backed by the powerful American Medical Association and designed, critics say, to control the supply of eligible doctors. Working class unions may be collapsing but with a lobbying power rivaling that of the gun lobby, white-collar unions, euphemistically referred to as associations—American Medical Association, American Association of Orthodontists, American Bar Association—are thriving even if their members are not.

YOU AREN'T HERE ↓

Is it just forgetfulness... or
Alzheimer's disease?

• Memory loss • Asking repeated questions • Trouble using words

When signs like these begin to affect everyday life, they may not be a part of normal aging. They may be signs of Alzheimer's disease, an incurable, progressive illness that robs patients and their families of a lifetime of memories.

Today, however, the outlook for many is becoming more hopeful. ARICEPT™ is a clinically proven, once-a-day prescription medicine available to treat symptoms in patients with mild to moderate Alzheimer's disease. Already, over 400,000 patients in the United States have begun ARICEPT™ therapy.

ARICEPT™ is well tolerated, but some people do experience side effects like nausea, diarrhea, insomnia, vomiting, muscle cramps, fatigue, and loss of appetite. In clinical studies, these effects were generally mild, temporary, and went away with continued ARICEPT™ use. 2% of people taking ARICEPT™ experienced fainting.

Only a doctor can evaluate symptoms such as forgetfulness and diagnose Alzheimer's disease. Speak to a doctor today about the benefits of ARICEPT™ in treating Alzheimer's disease.
