The Left Is Too Right

I don't know how much a person needs to own to live. No idea. I don't even know if necessity is the weapon against consumerism and exploitative mechanisms.

Recently, I saw a series of photos from 1974 in a German magazine, that showed all pieces of clothing, that a woman owned, at the time the photos were taken. I have no clue if this woman's amount of clothing represents a prestigious average for 1974 or not. Altogether she owned 72 pieces, including underpants and shoes.
