As Thomas sat in the Boeing 787 Dream-liner, his mind drifted:

To be without history, only future. No weights attached, no responsibilities except that of arrival. Even the arrival is unsettled, without schedule. In a sense, it's as if everything that ever happened up until this point bears no consequence. There was never any point of departure, so the arrival is without return. No re-turn just turn. How incredible it must be to hurl oneself through time weightlessly. To stop time and simply exist.

Will there be people watching?

“When Joan of Arc crowned her King at Rheims she became immortal. When Lafayette risked his all to help the struggling Americans he wrote his memory forever across a mighty continent. Shepard boy David in five minutes achieved with his sling a place in history which has defied all time.

These three shining names represent the triumph of the idealism of youth, and we would not speak of them with such reverence to-day had their motives been less pure or had they ever for an instant thought of themselves or their place in history.”
