SEASONS GREETINGS

July 23 – September 3, 2022
620 Kearny St., San Francisco

Iggy Capra (b. 1991, San Francisco) is an artist, radio DJ, and poet living in Oakland, CA.

All life long
you are unhanding
unhanding and unhanding what was handed you.

All life long
you throw out the line of life.
You throw out the line, stinging up from your guts.

Were they planting trees,
your father and your mother?
Did they ever plant?
Is that a line of trees
far away
green line?

All life long
you include something that includes your life.
You are in the egg.

(In the center of a picture, two angels hold a transparent crystal egg of teardrop shape. In the egg the ocean god is throned, left leg crossed over right, trident in right hand. Under his outstretched arms two children or little people stand, a boy at his right, a girl at his left. The boy's head is crowned with a sun, the girl's, with a crescent moon.

That's the middle level of the picture. At the top a blazing sun with human features dominates the vertical axis. At the bottom a man and a woman kneel on either side a furnace, man to the right of the furnace, woman to the left. In the furnace itself, directly below the egg containing the god, is suspended a similar egg, empty.)

All life long
the dew falls from heaven
all life long trees climb up from underground waters.

In the seed of the old god the new gods are swarming.

Earth is ready for planting.

The shut eye is opening.

The heat.
