You know what a poor correspondent I am. I haven't been able to muster up the courage to tell you this, but I've been unable to sing since you moved abroad. Our troupe, along with every other endeavor that requires an inventory of our inert public life, has come to pieces. This is my last appeal to your senses, to get you back. Images alone mean nothing. Images alone mean nothing without another's fabled discretion? This is for you, a poor ploy but with integrity. Your wayward American congregation needs you.

Your friend.
