GALERIJA ALMA and Tirkultūra will present a live music and video performance by Artemy Troitsky.

Artemy Troitsky is one of Russia's best known music critics, journalists and publicists. He has been recognized by the New York Times as "the leading critic of Soviet rock ». He has written for The Guardian, The New York Times, Rolling Stone, New Statesman, Playboy, New Musical Express, The Face, Spiegel and others (1975-2020). He currently writes columns for BBC News Russian (UK), the Estonian newspaper Postimes, Echo Moskv, The Moscow Times and Novaya Gazeta, hosts a radio show on the international broadcaster Radio Free Europe (Radio Liberty) and a regular TV show on the Estonian news channel ARU.TV.

Troitsky has won several awards for his radio broadcasts (FM Dostoyevsky) and best TV show (Cafe Oblomov), an award for best press publication in Russia and a Lifetime Achievement Award in Finland.

In 2018, the documentary film The Critic, directed by Andrei Airapetov, about Artemy's involvement in the development of rock music in the 1980s, was released, the same year he also played one of the leading roles in Kirill Serebrennikov's internationally acclaimed film Summer (Leto).

Since 2014, he has been living in Tallinn, Estonia, where he works as a teacher. Artemijs also teaches at universities in Finland and London, and lectures at various US institutions, Moscow State University and elsewhere.
