I AM THE PASSENGER acts as a looking glass for perceiving our current moment in time and place—within the lineage of non-objective painting.

We relate to non-objective painting in both corporeal and immaterial ways. Non-objective painting wants to stir something. Non-objective painting connects with our bodies. Severe yet playful, non-objective painting is evidence of the artist operating within a greater movement of creation. We bear witness to the journey of artist as passenger when we stand in view of non-objective painting. Non-objective painting is about feeling and perceiving in the body, it's personal, it's universal.

“Dial open the valve of consciousness, infinite world of mind and affection and intelligence. This mystery is in the body, outside of time, beyond the reach of culture.” -Terence McKenna
