“By virtue of intuitive association, the smell of resin reaching the scorching-hot room of an obnoxious suburb can cause the walls to silently collapse, the dreary wallpaper to vanish and an invading forest of conifers to suck us into the immobile chasm of a dream. An irreplaceable forest, transfigured by the unconscious work of the memory that we would otherwise have failed to invoke with an intelligence capable only of fabricating fake forests.”

Carlo Mollino, Il Messaggio dalla Camera Oscura, Chiantore, Turin, 1949, p. 103
