Tucker Rae-Grant
ambiguous posture

Paramount Ranch 3
January 30, 2016 - January 31, 2016

Tucker Rae-Grant makes wire sculptures and non-representational paintings. He uses wood-working techniques to build eccentric stretcher bars or wooden keystones for flexible metal. In the paintings, stretching, fabric choice, and paint application are used equally to improvise compositions.

Rae-Grant's work explores the interpersonal lives of things and their roles in the process of becoming. Incorporating queer, modernist, and Marxist ideas about subjectivity, objecthood, and time, Rae-Grant's work creates an affective tangle of hope and compromise, community and disidentification.
