A very good friend of mine, J, is riding his bike from Oslo to Milano in a rather flexible timeframe. The journey will take him through Denmark, into Germany and Berlin, through Saxony and the eastern parts of Germany before entering the Czech Republic. He will return to Germany and Bavaria before riding into Austria, over the Alps and Dolomites and into Südtirol, Lombardy and at one point ending up in Milano.

Before J was leaving, I asked him if he would like to make a brief stop in Berlin where my good friend F would give him an envelope of printed works on paper by a selection of artists. The works would all be printed and packed by F in advance. And on his way through Europe, when he was to find a spot, building, cabin, hotel room, scenery, ruin, riverbank, mountain, cliff, meadow, or anything that he would find suitable and a little Altanish he would install the exhibition, document it, de-install it and continue his journey south.
