

Your Presence Is a Present is a provocation of permissibility.

A question of complicity.

A potentiality – where objects can exist to become one thing or another.

It appears that the lack of signage adds to the allure: Should we encounter these tools and objects on display and project their apparent value, or shall we seduce further attitudes?

These objects are alive. They behave. However, they can also be active and even perform with someone's complicity.

1. A vitrine filled with Constantin Thun's belongings; maybe a portrait?
 - It might as well ponder the creation of content and value.

2. A wooden wishing well from the Hudson Valley region.
 - Found by Constantin Thun + Daré Dada.
 - Sourced with the help of Amy Linker. Thank you.

3. Olu Ogunnaike's charcoal on mirrored steel are recognizable by their traces.
 - The nature of charcoal leaves impressions that are a reflection of their fleeting and nascent gestures.
 - These encounters with loved ones are understood as moments.
Moments of being grounded.
Moments of love.
Moments of comfort.
Moments of warmth.
Moments of presence.
