Summer Program with Kaya, Kerstin Brätsch and Debo Eilers

KUB Arena embodies the unfamiliar, presenting a program that consistently questions the art institution. It is the place within Kunsthhaus Bregenz where art enters into a dialogue with other areas of cultural production, probing new spaces that enable contemporary art to be experienced in unconventional ways. For this year's summer program, the New York based artists Kerstin Brätsch and Debo Eilers have been invited to Bregenz, to present their joint project, KAYA. Kaya is a real person, an 18-year-old young woman from Texas, who the two artists have been collaborating with since 2010. She forms both the departure and focus point of their exhibitions, performances, and interventions. Kaya will be visiting Bregenz between August 27 and 30, on her first trip to Europe, to spend some summer days by the lake with Kerstin Brätsch, Debo Eilers, and other guests. KUB Arena will once again this year, be temporarily abandoning the Kunsthhaus during the summer, to explore various locations around the town and its vicinity instead.
