Cobb: Yes. Remember, you are the dreamer, you build this world. I am the subject, my mind populates it. You can literally talk to my subconscious. That's one of the ways we extract information from the subject.

Hi Norm, long time no heard. I'm not feeling any better because my depression came back during the summer, which I didn't bother going out for couple of days including today. You see, it all started when back in January shortly after winter break. I found that my cousin was getting married with her boyfriend.

They had been dating for about 8 years. Apparently, he send a video of himself saying this through the Ipad to her quote "I love you, will you marry me". I heard about this and saw the video through the internet in her microblog. I was shocked since she got married at the age 38 (Yes, she's 38 years old) I thought that she never going to get marry and I knew that the day will come. I still have feelings for her since me and my cousin were close together I had fun enjoy leisure time during the year 2009 and last year's summer. She always send me gifts when it comes to my birthday, she cared about me that I really trusted her the most.

She showed my around the city of Hong Kong (yes, she's living in Hong Kong, China) I had great time when touring around. We had couple things in common there are: watching anime, being funny, internet surfing, love, comedy, and that's all I can think of. She loves pull pranks on me, I remember one time she pranked me by painting my nails the first thing I woke up in the morning. As a revenge, I ended up getting her into the sofa tickling her torso and her feet (those were the spots that she ticklish the most) I was tickling her that I didn't realize I ticked too long that she wet her pants. She mad at me and started to cry and went to her bed (She was mad as a joke but the crying wasn't I knew I was screwed). Her being married I thought about the fun time we had that thing won't be fun anymore.

I guess they're both meant for each other and I really want her to be more happy. If she really really loves him so much, so let it be. After all, she's getting old and need someone to love, care for, and not be alone. I believe she need reproduce childern for new generation of family.

After a while, I let it all go, my depression was actually reason I joined video production other than being introduced by those guys like i said and do something productive as well. Currently, still trying to get over the depression and I think about joining the video production again so I will be back.

Best luck of your job interview and follow your dreams. I can't believe you're in New York and it's raining. As for me, I'm sitting in my heels in Chicago surfing the web.
