DANIEL WEISSBACH
STELLEN

Daniel Weissbach (b.1976, Berlin, DE – d. 2020, DE) receives his sixth – and third posthumous – solo exhibition Stellen at Ruttkowski;68 in Paris.

Excerpts and details of real places form a central point of reference in Weissbach's œuvre. In the isolation of these places from their original context, in their appropriation and transformation into new contexts of meaning, worldly conditions and limitations shift and create layers of time between the present and past. The permanence of change and the continuity of history can be found in the frozen moments, in the places that elude the dissolution of collected traces.

Through the series of works, the geometric grid of tiled walls at transit points of our present, the zones of transition and everyday encounters is distorted, alienated and made available for the ambivalence of the indeterminate. Their successive abstraction turns the joints into lines, the lines into Weissbach's unmistakable visual language. They function like a body that preserves the past, being both visibly and invisibly inscribed.

For their traces in the present, Weissbach developed multimedia languages, forms of expression and identities that run through his entire body of work.

Alongside the exhibition, that was initially shown in Düsseldorf before moving on to New York and now ending in Paris, a book has been published with previously unpublished insights into his world of ideas, that lets impact and value of his artistic legacy live on.
