

BONYLAB

Elisa Diaferia & Juri Simoncini

HUSSLEHOF

05.10.24 - 16.11.24

For their new solo show, the artist duo focus their research on the world of film production as a container of translation processes, insisting on questions of accessibility in the context of storytelling.

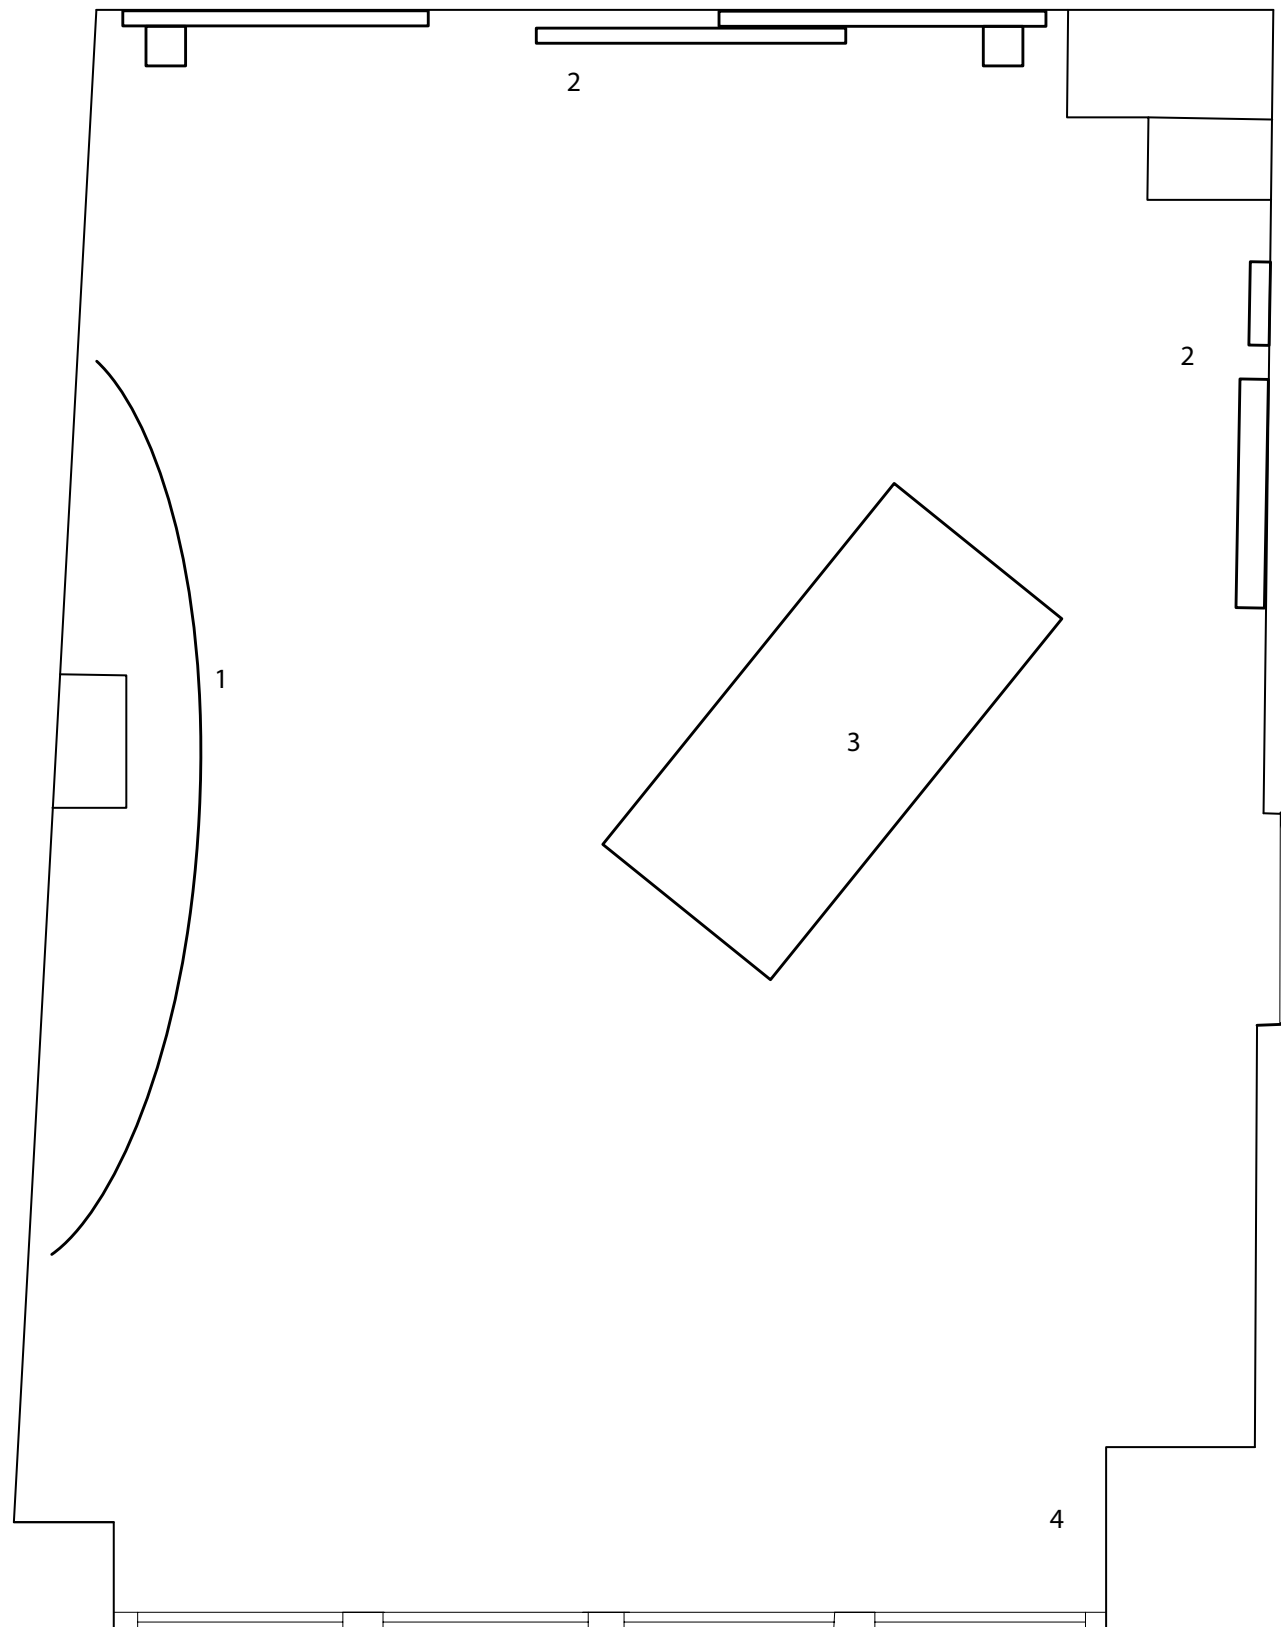

The movie is intended here as a framework, a choral machine to observe the tension points in the assembly line of worldbuilding, with its continuous linguistic negotiations. In the show, these offer a point of view to look into the narrative and transactional implications that regulate the relation between drawing, sound, written word and movement.

In a theatrical endeavor combining sci-fi, crime and musical genres, the narration reflects on the relationship between elements such as voice and body, apparatus and diegesis, mythology and landscape.

Elisa Diaferia and Juri Simoncini are two Italian artists active between Germany and Italy.

Their clue-bearing installations observe the potential of a critical mass to contain meaning. In their practice, a case of study is often 'rewritten' through an injective research approach, making of it a tool for fantasy and speculation, and allowing stories to become unstable. With a sculptural attitude to sound, and a musical one to form, they bridge languages with a focus on machinic imagery, as a revealing space for the phenomenological structure of things.

The show is made possible through the support of Kulturstadt Frankfurt am Main.

1 Nubicuculia
Alcohol markers, ink and pencil on hand embossed paper, wood, MDF, webbing, buckles, sliders, magnets

2 Fifth voice
Plexiglass, wood, adhesive film, glass paint, ball bearings, brass bolts and spacers, rubber, speakers, LCD screen, video 30' loop

3 Spike
Wood, mdf, tissue paper, magnets, rubber, beamer, video 30' loop

4 Flirt, reprise
Laquer on MDF, adhesive film, glasses, cd cases, bolts and screws

Soundtrack for BONYLAB
8 audio tracks
Kids 45"
Saxdoors 1'
M 1'14"
The birds 1'54"
Prometheus 3'44"
Intermezzo 56"
Guilty 4'05"
Rainband 3'09"