Marie Angeletti
Provvisorio

January 15, 2025

The five provvisorios were found in Milan this past December.

When someone is buried, while waiting for a tombstone to be made and paperwork to be sorted, a provvisorio is installed in order to visually delimit and identify where the body is.

It creates a perimeter.

Once the tombstone is ready, the provvisorio is then removed and replaced by a permanent tombstone. It does not belong to the individual and continues to be reused for the placement of other bodies.

The silver works on paper were made before and at the same time.
