

The following text has been quoted from Paul Krainak's Bad at Sports review of Door County Contemporary.

"The Plan," a Chicago-based artist run Gallery known for assembling post-conceptual mind-probing exhibitions on subjects like "pata-physics," internal emotional landscapes, and performative interventions, was one of the non-traditional, post-material project spaces welcomed at the fair. The space's deftly fragmented installation by Chicago sculptor Ari Norris which included masking tape and "Pink Pearl" eraser sculptures constructed of wood and paint, was among other things a "fruitful" Maurizio Cattelan/Claes Oldenburg wisecrack."
