

Until the case was closed they could not be certain which way to jump, whether they should cry out that they were martyrs, or remain what, at heart, of course, they were, simple citizens, bitter against outrage and anxious to see justice done and the health of the state preserved.

James Baldwin, Giovanni's Room 1956

(This document was automatically generated by Contemporary Art Library.)