A list is a sequence of items, arranged one after another, to organise and communicate information clearly.

A depot is a hub of storage and movement.

A hoarding used to secure vacant properties is typically constructed from perforated heavy-duty galvanised steel sheets and finished in Vandyke Brown paint.

A chattel is a legal term that means a piece of personal property, something that can be owned, moved, and traded.

A bucranium refers to the skull of a sacrificed ox, relating to the ancient Greek and Roman ceremonies of sacrifice.

A leaf will still decompose if wrapped in plastic, but the process will be significantly slowed down.

A birthstone is a gemstone that represents a person's birth month, believed to have metaphysical properties that promote spiritual well-being.

A stamp is a mark used to authenticate something.

A magnet is an object that produces a magnetic field.

A regular slotted container (RSC) is a standard cardboard box used for shipping goods, where all flaps are the same length for efficiency.

A vinyl wrap is used to protect steel products from damage and corrosion during shipping and handling.

A clock is a device for measuring and showing time. It is commonly used to differentiate between work and leisure times.

A variable quantity is a value that can change or vary.

A pause is a temporary stop.

An exhibition is a pause.
