STATEMENT

This installation is one of a series which explores ideas of extension, continuity, and regeneration. It follows 'Extensums - works in progress' (C.S.A., July 1987) where elements were placed on a ground of steel, canvas and rubber.

The simple placements of materials and generative elements were unfixed, free to reform, with adaption and extension, in some other situation.

In 'Extensum - soft ground' new kinds of ground are used for extension and growth. Canvas and cloth stained from the basic ground of steel flow extensively out into the space. Lightweight plywood elements are placed upon this ground, propped lightly against each other. Impermanent paint contrasts with the impregnated colour of oxide stained materials.
